Keynote Speaker

H.E. Mr. Yukio Takasu, Ambassador Extraordinary & Plenipotentiary

This symposium explores the growing interdependence between business and human security, taking a close look at current issues and opportunities arising from their convergence. Today, human security is no longer achieved simply through the protection of national security, international law, or international relations. It requires a concerted effort from all sectors of society, including the private sector.

Reforms of market-oriented economies through globalisation have proven to be factors that will further develop the private sector and make it more powerful, whereas state sovereignty on the other hand, is losing ground. How, in our globalising world, can human security be ensured against new threats, such as armed conflicts, natural disasters, refugee exodus, pandemics, and poverty? This symposium seeks to address this question and to discuss the future implications for human security and global business.
